The purpose of Amendment 001 is to answer questions from suppliers.

Q. The supplied instructions for the R2 lead to some confusion. It is indicated that text should be formatted as instructed in both the FCR Formatting Standards and Guidelines document as well as the supplied example (SidebySide.pdf). The supplied SidebySide.pdf is formatted in a much larger font and line spacing than any other indication suggests. This .pdf does not match other similar publications found on your Web Site either. Is the SidebySide.pdf only to be used as general reference for alignments and indentations, but not for font sizes and line spacing or is this larger font and line spacing a new standard which is exclusive to the Jugement sections?

A. Yes, the SidebySide.pdf is to be used as a general reference for alignments and indentations. It also shows you what text is in the larger font (regular text) and which is in the smaller font (quoted text). The actual font sizes to use as well as the line spacing are dictated by the FCR Formatting Standards and Guidelines document.

All other terms and conditions of the Solicitation remain the same.
