- Question 17 Several mandatory and rated requirements for many of the categories require a given number of years (e.g. 5 or 10 years) performing quite a list of tasks such as “designing, engineering, installing, configuring, testing, troubleshooting, supporting and maintaining ...[some technology]”. In these cases, we interpret it to mean that candidates must have a total of the required number of years of cumulative experience that includes some experience with each of the enumerated task items, as opposed to mean that candidates must have the given number of years performing each and every task enumerated. We take this interpretation because as subject matter experts progress through their careers they begin to take on various tasks and may not perform each and every tasks during each project. For example, when they are “designing and engineering” they may not also be “installing” for that same project. Please confirm this interpretation.
- Question 17 Yes, the proposed candidates must have the total required number of years of cumulative experience; this must be a combination of experience in each of the enumerated task items . For example, must include some experience in each of designing, engineering, installing, etc., which must total the required number of years of experience. This clarification pertains to any resource mandatory or rated criteria requesting a given number of years of experience for each item listed in that criterion.
