This amendment 003 is being issued to answer the following questions.

Questions

- Q.1 For the Specialist Researcher resource category, is an undergraduate degree equivalent to computer science or computer engineering (such as a mechatronics degree) acceptable?
- A.1 For Specialist Researcher, we need a specialist with extensive software development expertise and experience. The required software development methods and skill sets can be demonstrated by a formal training through a Bachelor's degree program in either computer science or computer engineering. Any other degrees are not acceptable.
- Q.2 For the Technical Support Researcher category, is an undergraduate degree equivalent to computer science or computer engineering (such as a mechatronics degree) acceptable?
- A.2 For Technical Support Research category, the required expertise and experience are in psychology, computer science, computer engineering, knowledge management, or technical communications. The scientific methodologies and skill sets have to be obtained through a formal training through a Bachelor's degree program in one of these fields. Any other degrees are not acceptable.
- Q.3 Is there an incumbent for this opportunity?
- A.3 No.
