This amendment is raised to answer the following question:

Q1: I understand DND requires a Soda Blast System, however, they are specifying that they require a Reclaiming System with this system. In regards to Soda Media, this is not typically a Media that is able to be reclaimed, as it will break down into a dust once used.. Can you tell me what the end user is looking to accomplish by this reclaiming system? Do they want to reclaim/recycle the dust, which would in fact not be able to be re-used as a viable media?

A1: The goal is to reclaim the soda blast or other similar medias. If the soda blast or other similar media is not re-usable or too fine after being utilized, the reclaiming system will separate it. This system was designed/engineered to met our current process requirements.
