QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q1: In case that overdredging is necessary for manoeuvrability and security of the equipment and the crew, can the disposal site received the double of the estimated quantity?

A1: A permit is being approved for 25 000 cmpm, which includes normal overdredging and potential maintenance dredging. PWGSC may commence a process to increase ocean disposal amounts to 50 000 cmpm, but understand that there is certainly no guarantee this amount will be approved or more importantly that the permit for this amount will be available at the time of dredging.

Q2: It can be seen from different maps that the channel is not yet fully open. Looks like the dunes will have to be open in order to navigate from the outside part to the inside part prior to the dredging job. Is the opening already done or will it be done prior to the beginning of the project?

A2: The New South Tabusintac Gully is a breach thru the dune that occurred spring 2013, and is too recent to be captured by internet mapping. Drawing M1 of M3 represents best depiction of dune as of December 4, 2013.

Q3: What is the minimum draft actually found in the proposed disposal sea site?

A3: Line E-C and F-G of disposal site Drawing M1-M3 extends from 0.00 m to approximately -5m
