SECTION B - QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q55. Attachment 4.1 Testing Plan

Your test plan is extremely comprehensive - probably the most organized customer acceptance document that we have seen in our many years in business.

However, we have concerns that - prior to a contract award - it may set the bar too high for a genuinely collaborative working relationship and the best outcome for yourselves in terms of end-product. We say this because we have yet to see one installation where the requirements specification was able to capture 100% of customer needs accurately. There are always configuration changes needed after experiencing live field use. We see little opportunity in this RFP for a "working together" co-operative approach to acceptance, deployment and needed re-configurations over the implementation, training and fine-tuning project run-up period. We recognize that this isn't so easy to write within the limitations of the RFP process. However, the very short turnaround timeframes, harsh elimination criteria and requirement for multiple loaner systems - all prior to contract award - might make it difficult for any supplier to make a rational business decision to engage in this exercise where there is considerable business risk for the supplier with no guarantee of any financial return.

Would you consider amending your testing plan to address these issues? Our suggestion would be to eliminate this section completely and ask bidders to submit a detailed test plan which you can score as part of the RFP evaluation process. This approach would help enable a supplier to partner with you to ensure a successful conclusion to the project.
