Amendment No. 005

This amendment is being raised to provide responses to Requests for Clarification.

Responses to Requests for Clarification

- Q1. As noted in Addendum 3 that work for projects can include a completed feasibility study or functional program. On large, multi-year projects, aspects such as feasibility studies, concept designs, functional programs and such are completed while other aspects may be on-going such as contract documents, construction or commissioning. Will the completed aspect of those projects be accepted?
- R1. A completed feasibility studies and functional program can be included as a project. However, Proponents are also expected to provide examples of completed construction projects.
- Q2. Can in house/on staff project team members of the prime consultant include some of the key specialist/subconsultant roles such as interior design, specification writer? Is there a specific designation for either of these specialists required?
- R2. Key specialists roles can be part of the in-house staff of the Prime Consultant. Specialists should demonstrate that they have the relevant experience, education and professional accreditation to practice in their field.
- Q3. In the total page limit of 55 pages, is there a limit or expectation for the hypothetical projects?
- R3. No. Proponents are to organise their proposals, including assigning the appropriate number of pages, in a manner that best responds to each respective Rated Requirement under SRE 3.2.
- Q4. In the submission requirements (2.2) it notes that tabs, page dividers are exempt if free from text or graphics. Can images or photographs be used if general in nature, as long as there is no project information (such as a project info sheet such as described in 3.2.3) and/or some text to describe the section that follows (such as 3.2.2 Team Approach/Management of Services).
- R4. Pages with images, photographs and/or text are included in the fifty-five (55) page limitation that applies to the Rated Requirements under SRE 3.2.
- Q5. Under 3.1.2, the proponent and team must be authorized to provide the services requested; other than a statement attesting to the fact that our team meets the license requirements, do you require proof such as copy of certificate of practice, certificate of authorization or otherwise and, if so, can this be exempt from the page limit (for each of the consultant services required could be a one page copy of the licence and consume 4-9 pages of the 55 page limit).
- R5. Please provide a copy of the certificate of practice and/or authorization. Items submitted under SRE 3.1 Mandatory Requirements are not subject to a page limitation. The fifty-five (55) page limitation applies to the Rated Requirements under SRE 3.2.

All other terms and conditions of the solicitation remain the same.
