Questions and Answers – Series 2

Q1. What security clearance and when is the security clearance required by the organization bidding?

A1. The security clearance level required by the organization bidding is RCMP Secret. The organization that is recommended for contract award will be required to obtain a security clearance before the contract is awarded.

Q2. What security clearance and when is the security clearance required by the proposed individual consultant(s)?

A2. The security clearance level required by the proposed individual is RCMP Secret. The individual will be required to obtain a security clearance before a contract is awarded.

Q3. A question I have is in regards to whether a bidder can also bid on other radio related projects with the RCMP. For example can an OEM (other equipment manufacturer) or partner of an OEM which could potentially provide radio equipment to the RCMP be allowed to bid on this project or does the company have to not be associated with the Radio Market?

A3. The goal is to engage the services of a company or person(s) that are LMR (Land Mobile Radio) vendor-agnostic to provide the miscellaneous RF-related tasks. If the company or person(s) can declare that they are vendor-agnostic and that LMR industry perceives them as vendor-agnostic, then NRS is OK with them bidding.
