Solicitation Amendment 001 is being issued to provide questions and answers to date.

Question 1)

Reference to ANNEX "C" Mandatory Technical Requirements, item 9: i. The contractor must, as part of the bid submission, must submit documentation clearly indicating the contractor's experience, in provision of electrical, mechanical and millwright services. Submission is to include the journey person(s) trade certificates and their experience as the contractor's personnel. Related training and formal courses taken by personnel must accompany the contractor's documentation.

About the journey person(s) trade certificates, we always send a technical representative for installing and training in most of the cases from the manufacturer of the equipment themselves, but this certificate seems to be used for academic purposes and for trade persons to have apprentice. We are not sure why is DND asking for this certification since we have supplied DND with numerous machinery and equipment and provided the required training and installations but this is the first time such certificate is being asked for. In favor of being able to propose Canada the best possible offer, I would like to kindly ask to relax this "journey person requirement".

Answer 1)

That clause is there only if their equipment requires a certified red seal electrician or millwright to complete certain tasks. For example, if the company requires an electrical transformer to be hooked up in order to provide power to the machine, then a certified electrician must complete this work. The FSR is not authorized to perform the electrical work. As for commissioning the equipment, if the FSR is trained to do so, then he/she may do so.
