QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question 19

RE: AM2 QA 12 – As a supplier of ERP services under TBIPS since its inception we do not believe that the 60-40 evaluation criteria is in TBS's best interest. By emphasizing price over technical merit, less qualified Bidders are encouraged to submit low rates. This is highly problematic for ERP professional services where any resource with the caliber of skills and depth of experience that TBS needs is in demand and will not be compelled to work for lower rates. So TBS will end up with a Bidder that either cannot fill the roles or will provide resources who cannot effectively perform the work. Both scenarios certainly do not represent good value and will not provide the outcome TBS must have. We also point out that we can think of no recent TBIPS for ERP services (SAP, PeopleSoft etc.) where the evaluation criteria was other than 70% technical 30% financial which further demonstrates the need to stress expertise over price. To do otherwise risks going against a history of success and the realities of the ERP services market.

Question 20

There is no requirement to present a team of resources and no criteria that measures a Bidder's ability to provide ERP resources for an ERP HR project in a timely manner. We recommend that TBS add a requirement that demonstrates a Bidder's ability to on-board no less than 10 ERP resources in a 60-day period using only one contract, covering at least 3 of 7 of the required categories providing for services for an ERP HR project within the last 3 years. This will ensure that the Bidder can meet TBS's needs and mitigate the risk of interrupted service and/or project delays.

Answer 20

Bidders' capability to provide multiple simultaneous resources is taken into consideration under the point-rated criterion R.1.3. Bench Strength on page 97 of the solicitation. The Solicitation remains unchanged.
