Question No. 8:

Under Mandatory Requirements for speech writing it states:

"Speechwriting: - Experience in drafting speeches in English; - Experience in drafting speeches in French; - Ability to assess tones and convey departmental messages; - Work with individual and team to develop speeches.

Does this mean that sole proprietors, such as myself, must have the ability to write speeches in both languages?

Answer No. 8:

All streams are separated and you are asked to only submit a proposal for the stream that you are capable of covering. All streams (translation, editing proofreading and speechwriting) are separated by English and French. Different companies may be selected for the English stream than the French stream. You are not required to write speeches in both official languages.
