QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Question 7

ART. 11.2.E.1.1 - Does the inspection report have to be signed by an engineer? Inspection firms do not provide this kind of service. There is confusion with section 11.2.E.1.2.

ART. 11.2.E.1.2 - Do the drawings have to be signed by an engineer?

In short, our understanding is that you want a firm that takes the measurements and will provide a detailed report. Then, another firm will take the report and make the replacement steel drawings. The drawings will be signed. This section will be addressed using a 1379. Please confirm.

Answer : In short, the specification calls for a firm to take the surveys, provide a report and provide the steel replacement drawings to be used in another contract for the steel replacement. No, it is not necessary for the inspection report and drawings to be signed/stamped by an engineer.

Question 8

Considering that the NOVUS Hi-TEMP seal comes from Europe, it will be very difficult to obtain it within the desired timeframe.

We are working on finding a distributor.

On the other hand, we have another proposal: KLINGER MILAM MICA PSS 300. The seal however resists to 885 Degrees Celsius. Is this acceptable?

PS. The delivery time is 25 business days.

Answer : In the event that Novus Hi-Temp is not available within a reasonable time frame, the proposed product may be accepted. It should be noted that the Contractor must respect the Contract dates and delivery charges for expedited shipping (if applicable) must be included in the bid.

MODIFICATION #2 TO THE SPECIFICATIONS

MODIFICATION #2 concerns only the French version of the Specifications.
