Solicitation Amendment 003 is raised to answer the following bidder questions:

Q1. We are hoping to bid the exact product requested however the technical literature we have doesn't highlight all of the technical requirements. Will this be an issue?

A1. You may be referring to the line item detail which was included in error and removed as per solicitation amendment 002. Any goods which meets the mandatory technical criteria will be considered technically responsive.

Please refer to Part 3, Section I: Technical Bid and the 2003 Standard Instructions – Goods or Services – Competitive Requirements, Article 05 Submission of Bids.

Failure to provide the technical literature or technical data which proves compliance to the mandatory technical criteria will result in a bid being found technically non-responsive and your bid will be disqualified.

Q2. Will this relative gravimeter be used for gravity surveys (making measurements and comparing values at different locations) or will it just be used for a single location?

A2. The instrument will be running continuously at a single location for an extended period of time. It is not to conduct gravity surveys in the field.
